

Certificate of RoHS Compliance for Monitors

Concerning the 3D PluraView Stereo Monitor

I. RoHS Directive

The Directive 2011/65/EU of the European Parliament and Council of 8 June 2011 on the restrictions of the use of certain hazardous substances in electrical and electronic equipment is hereinafter referred to as the RoHS Directive. The RoHS Directive bans the placing on the EU market of new Electrical and Electronic Equipment (EEE) containing more than the set levels of lead, cadmium, mercury, hexavalent chromium and both polybrominated biphenyl (PBB) and polybrominated diphenyl ethers (PBDE) flame retardants from 1 July 2006.

II. Use of RoHS Controlled Substances

Schneider Digital GmbH hereby certifies that our products are RoHS compliant while the products listed below under "III. Applicable Products" may contain lead, mercury, hexavalent chromium, PBB and PBDE with a limit of 1000ppm and cadmium with a limit of 100ppm defined per homogeneous material.

For purposes of this Certificate the following definitions apply:

- The term homogeneous material means a material that cannot be mechanically disjointed into different materials. The term homogeneous is understood as of uniform composition throughout, so examples of homogeneous materials would be individual types of plastics, ceramics, glass, metals, alloy, paper, board, resins and coatings.
- The term mechanically disjointed means that the materials can be, in principle, separated by mechanical actions such as unscrewing, cutting, crushing, grinding and abrasive processes.
